Lt-General Sir George Tom Molesworth Bridges was also entitled to the K.C.B.(M), K.C.M.G., Order of Dannebrog, Cmdr., Crown of Italy, Grand Cross, Crown of Belgium, Grand Cross and Leopold Grand Cross.

Bridges, Sir (George) Tom (Molesworth) (1871–1939), Lieutenant-General.

Tom Bridges, as he was commonly called, was educated at Newton Abbot College and the Royal Military Academy, was gazetted 2nd Lieutenant in the Royal Artillery in 1892 and spent the early part of his service in India. In August 1898 he was posted to the new formation of the armed forces of Central Africa at Zomba, Nyasaland, where he was when the South African war broke out. Between 1899 and 1901 he served with the Imperial Light Horse, taking part in the Relief of Ladysmith, being severely wounded. He was promoted Captain in April 1900. Between May and July 1901 he commanded the 5th and 6th West Australian Mounted Infantry. Subsequently he took part in the operations in the Orange River Colony, on the Zululand frontier of Natal, and in Cape Colony. He was twice mentioned in dispatches, and was given a brevet majority in August 1902.

Between 1902 and 1904 Bridges served in East Africa and took part in operations in Somaliland, being in command of the Tribal Horse (which he raised), and being again severely wounded. He was again mentioned in dispatches and he received the D.S.O. During 1905 and 1906 he passed through the Staff College and was employed in the Military Intelligence Directorate at the War Office in 1907 and subsequently as chief instructor at the Cavalry School at Netheravon. In 1908 he transferred to the 4th Dragoon Guards as a Major. Between 1910 and 1914 he was military attaché at Brussels, The Hague, Copenhagen, and Christiania.

In August 1914 Bridges went out to France with the British Expeditionary Force in command of a squadron of his regiment. On 22nd August his squadron was the first unit of the British Expeditionary Force to meet the Germans, near the village of Soignies. On 27th August there occurred at St. Quentin the incident for which he is perhaps best known. He found in the town two British battalions the commanding officers of which had given written assurances to the mayor that they would surrender with their units in order to save the town from bombardment. Bridges rallied the men of these battalions with a tin whistle and a toy drum purchased at the local toy-shop and led them back into contact with the remainder of the British forces.

On 3rd September, Bridges was given command of the 4th Hussars, but a month later was appointed head of the British military mission at the headquarters of the Belgian army, where he remained until December 1915, being wounded on the Yser. He then commanded the 19th Division until he lost a leg at Passchendaele in September 1917. He had been promoted Major-General in the previous January.

In the Spring of 1918 Bridges headed another mission to the United States. Between January and November 1919 he was employed, with the rank of Temporary Lieutenant-General, as chief of the British military mission to the army of the Orient, with headquarters at Salonika and subsequently at Constantinople. In 1920 he was sent to Novorossisk, where he arranged the evacuation of the remnants of General Denikin's White Russian army. Subsequently he was at Smyrna with the Greeks when they were driven out of Asia Minor by the Turks. He retired from the Army in 1922 with the rank of Honorary Lieutenant-General, and was Governor of South Australia from that year until 1927. From 1920 to the time of his death he was Colonel of the 5th Inniskilling Dragoon Guards and was also Colonel of the 9th Australian Light Horse and the 43rd Australian Infantry.

During the war of 1914–18 Bridges was nine times mentioned in dispatches, and was appointed C.M.G. (1915), C.B. (1918), and K.C.M.G. (1919), besides receiving numerous foreign decorations. In 1925 he was appointed K.C.B. He received honorary degrees from the universities of McGill and Adelaide.

"Amazing Adventure", by E. Keble Chatterton . . . 1935.

The Great Eastern Railway S.S. Cromer was on her way from the Hook of Holland, doing her commercial passage under command of Captain F. Beeching. It was a fine, clear, but dark, night and the time 11 p.m. The steamer had reached a position some half a dozen miles west of the Maas Light-vessel, when UB-13 (another unlucky number) could be seen about a couple of points on the starboard bow and trying to (cut) head the Cromer off. Captain Beeching, a fine sailorman and ship-handler, then tried one of those feats which to the layman seem so simple, but naval history has proved not so easy. To ram your enemy when steaming at high speed, and to strike him fairly instead of with a glancing blow, takes real seamanship and quick judgement even in daylight . . . but at night the task is considerably more tricky. Captain Beeching, however, determined to try saving his ship and passengers by attacking the enemy without further waste of time.

The Cromer had no other weapon than her steam, and at that moment she was hopping along doing $13\frac{1}{2}$ knots. Porting her helm, she made for the vague shape, and a violent impact followed. It was a sliding blow, so that the submarine came against the steamer's starboard bow, then down the latter's side till it banged heavily at the Cromer's stern. A great commotion rose from the submarine's conning tower, and shouts were heard in a foreign tongue, but the steamer wisely did not wait to investigate further and hurried homewards. Her weight and speed and bilge keel had combined to useful service. When, presently, in England a diver went down to examine, he reported that the fore end of her starboard bilge keel (which was nine feet under water) had been scored, and another long mark was observed on that side some eighteen inches below the waterline. Before the end of the month she went into dry dock and the scratches were clearly revealed. One more unfortunate submarine had been accounted for, so Captain Beeching received the D.S.C., a present of £750 from the Admiralty for himself, together with £250 for division among the crew.

M.C. L.G. 22.3.45 (For Burma). The following citation was copied from the original held at Records, Stanmore:

"Before the attack on Nippon Hill on 24 July 44, it was necessary to confirm a previous report that the JAP was holding the reverse slope only. Various small recon patrols met with little success because of JAP wariness and fondness for shifting his posns. overnight. It was imperative to obtain the desired information because the plan for the bn. attack was that the leading Coy should ascend the forward slope under cover of darkness and at first light charge the enemy on the reverse slope. On 22 July 44, Lieut. MORRISON with three men set out to recon Nippon Hill which according to the latest information, was held by two pls. Under cover of mist and by skillful use of cover afforded by the thick jungle and undergrowth, this officer was able to work his way forward into a favourable posn. to observe. He lay in concealment and watched, but owing to the JAP's skillful camouflage and concealment of movement he was unable to get the desired information from the posn. chosen. He decided on a bold step. Carefully positioning his men to cover his entry into the posn., he crept in through the enemy wire, working his way right on to the top of the hill which was completely bare and devoid of cover. With patience and fieldcraft he located all the enemy bunkers, the gaps in the wire and the best route for a night approach. This was not accomplished without his being spotted by the JAP sentry who raised the alarm, but who was promptly shot. Under a hail of fire Lieut. MORRISON withdrew his patrol unscathed. This remarkable feat was accomplished in broad daylight and without doubt, but for his accurate information supplied, assured the success of the bn. attack on 24 July 44. A member of the patrol guided the leading Coy up the forward slopes to the top of the hill under cover of darkness. Again during the course of this same operation, the bn. was given as its objective, Harvest Hill on 27 July 44. It was not known whether the hill was occupied or not. Time was pressing and Lieut. MORRISON was given the task of going ahead with a small recon patrol to reach the top of the hill ahead of the bn. Lieut. MORRISON, making skillful use of cover, and although tired and exhausted from many days fighting and marching, reached the top with a speed which was amazing, to find it unoccupied, with the JAP in posn. lower down the slopes overlooking the Lokchao Bridge. Despite his exhausted condition, he got his leading pl. established on the crest above the JAPS and this enabled the bn. to occupy the whole feature causing the enemy to withdraw SOUTH. Great credit is due Lieut. MORRISON for his high sense of duty, his fortitude in overcoming difficulties in terrain and weather, his determination to win through, and for the personal example he set at all times on his many successful patrols."

M.M. L.G. 25.11.43. Awarded for the Western Desert. "On April 7th, Sgt. Fitzpatrick was in charge of a mortar section mounted in a White Scout Car under comd of an Armd C Tp Leader. Near KJEDIDA he heard German voices and realised that the tp had been ambushed by a strong force hidden in the olive groves. He quickly warned the Tp Leader and almost at once the Tp came under heavy fire from two 88 mm guns only 400 yards away and many M.G. The Tp Leader's car was knocked out and Sgt. Fitzpatrick finding it impossible to turn round, ordered his men to dismount just before his own car was knocked out. For the next hour he led his men, encouraging them and crawling through the cornfields under intense fire and later pursued by infantry. Eventually he got them into safety and under cover of darkness the whole section returned to our lines. By his quick action and fine leadership he saved the lives of his men. Sgt. Fitzpatrick has served in the Western Desert since the outbreak of hostilities and at all times he has shown complete disregard for his personal safety."

SALE CATALOGUES

On the average we issue twelve or more Coin Catalogues and three Naval & Military Medal Catalogues each year, some of which are usually of Sales of important Collections.

CATALOGUE SUBSCRIPTIONS

Sale Catalogues, frequently illustrated, are normally posted to Subscribers about three weeks prior to the date of Sale.

Lists of "Prices Realised" are issued after each Sale, thus giving at a glance a reliable guide to value. The final test of value must always be auction prices rather than the figures given in books of reference, for changing times and fashions soon render the latter obsolete and misleading. The Lists of "Prices Realised" will probably be enclosed in a following Sale Catalogue.

AIR MAIL POSTAGE

To allow subscribers resident outside Europe time to submit Postal Bids, Sale Catalogues will, if desired, be sent by Air Mail. Air Mail postage is not, however, included in the Subscription Rate and the cost must be borne by the Subscriber. In such cases a deposit against the cost is required.
